

LOCAL TRADE UNUSUALLY GOOD

Fall Business in All Lines Is Exceptionally Brisk—Building Operations Increase.

HOUSES ARE STILL SCARCE

MONEY MARKET STRONG( BUT STOCKS ARE WEAK.

Very little change has taken place in local trade circles the past week, a good average early fall business being handled in practically every line of business.

The most hopeful sign is the continued activity in the real estate market and the increased activity in building operations. From all indications there will be no let up in the latter until late this winter. These are the two things that count heavily in Salt Lake's favor at present, as the slump in the building market throughout the greater part of the summer has been decided and disastrous.

Banks report an unchanged situation locally and with very little change in the national situation. Loans are being made at the same rates of interest in effect for several months past and the only noteworthy feature of the situation is possibly the close scrutiny that is being given collateral security. A greater interest in bond investments is noticeable throughout the country.

Retailers and Wholesalers.

The retail dry goods men, the shoe dealers and the clothing are experiencing an unusually heavy fall business. The hardware dealers claim their September business this year is considerably better than their trade from the same month last year. The stove market is naturally the feature of the business at this time and will continue so for several weeks to come.

The dry goods stores are still holding opening sales and those of the past few days have proven exceptionally attractive. The volume of retail trade as a whole has held its own with that of the past two weeks. Styles are very nobby and fall in everything. Prices are about the same as last year with the exception of silk stuffs.

Realty and Building.

The demand for residence lots continues to be the feature of the realty market, though there is an increased demand and inquiry on commercial property. The scarcity of houses for rent continues with no indications of the situation being relieved. The fact that advertisements of houses of the STATION BUILDING W.D. W.D. W.D. that can be rented bring from seventy-five to ninety replies within twenty-four hours after the publication of the advertisements is a pretty fair indication of the condition with which tenants and rental agencies are now confronted.

There are probably a dozen apartment houses nearing completion about town. Rents have not increased to any extent in spite of the unusual demand for houses and flats.

Within two weeks the first story of steel work will be set on the Newhouse buildings, according to statements made yesterday by the engineers in charge of the works. The steel for the first two stories will be here early this week. A train load of stone is now on the ground.

The Judge building is being pushed as fast as possible though a lack of brick has stopped the work several times the past ten days. Contractors are the busiest they have been in months and the largest part of their work is small houses. The new building of the Utah Savings & Trust company is practically completed and the bank will move in some time next month.

Stocks and Bonds.

The majority of the local stocks are now quoted ex-dividend. The Utah-Idaho Sugar company will pay its quarterly dividend and the same dividend for the Z. C. M. I. will be paid Oct. 15. Money is in strong demand, though there is no unusual movement in the commercial stocks at present.

A VARIATION.

(Washington Post.)
"I note," said the tourist, "that there are certain meaningless phrases popularly employed in this country. For instance, without being really interested in the slightest degree, people constantly say, 'How are you?'"
"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "except in Boston. There they say, 'Who are you?'"

1857

HIS is the year of jubilee for this store. Fifty years have passed since the institution was founded. Its beginning was humble, yet in every way suited to the town and the circumstances. The first building was a rough lumber room; the site was on Main Street just north of where the McCornick building now stands. Had the stores been numbered then, the Dinwoodey establishment would have been No. 68 So. Main Street. The place of business was known as Dinwoodey's Chair Shop. The founder toiled with his own hands and made such furniture as was used at that time. Native timber was skillfully converted into Chairs, Tables, Bedsteads, etc., and these were exchanged for raw material, or for farm produce, etc. The old-time motto of "live and let live" prevailed. From its inception the business grew rapidly until new quarters were sought for. The new site was selected, at the present place of business, and a building in advance of the times was erected. Again rapid development of business forced larger quarters, and the old building was replaced by a new one. A disastrous fire wiped out this building, which was replaced by the present structure. Then came the erection of a factory in the rear, and later warehouses of enormous capacity were added, until today we have the most modern, best equipped and best stocked furniture store in the city.

DINWOODEY'S CHAIR SHOP, THE FIRST PLACE OF BUSINESS. ON THE LEFT IS A BLACKSMITH SHOP.

DINWOODEY'S CABINET SHOP, LOCATED AT THE PRESENT PLACE OF BUSINESS ON FIRST SOUTH STREET.

It is but natural to suppose that a business the memory of whose inception goes back to the youth or childhood of the oldest inhabitants, would attain some prominence. That this store has not only kept apace with the times, but has always anticipated the city's progress, is a matter of history. We number among our patrons the sons and daughters of those sturdy folk who were our first customers. They have come to know that this store is not only a leader in fashions and styles, but that value commensurate with price is given every purchaser.

The strangers within our gates have heard the story told by patrons of the place. They, too, have joined the ranks, so that year by year our annual sales increase in a surprising ratio.

For the occasion of our jubilee we have filled the store from top to bottom with good things. We have priced these same good things so that our many friends may rejoice with us. We intend to let the spirit of generosity reign in this store. A fair profit and a pleased customer is our motto. We want you to come expecting something better than you usually get. Especially if you have never before visited the store. Come and see what is the correct thing in Home Furnishing. Visit the Wall Paper and Drapery Department, where thought is given to interior adornment. Visit the Carpet and Rug section, teeming with Oriental and Domestic productions. Then go to the other floors where every conceivable piece of furniture is on display in handsome Oak, Walnut, Mahogany and other woods. The store is a bower of beauty, a most inviting place to spend an hour, to rest—to look around—and without obligation to purchase. In this our Jubilee year—come in and rejoice with us.

REUNION OF HAND-CART VETERANS.

BY JOSIAH ROGERSON.

Ye Saints who dwell on Europe's shores, Prepare yourselves, with many more, To leave behind your native land, For sure His judgments are at hand. But you must cross the raging main Before the promised land you gain.

Chorus: And some must push and some must pull, etc.

The Herald is pleased to note that such a gathering will take place in the Assembly hall, Oct. 3, of the converts to the Mormon faith from the clans of Scotland, the Cambrians of Wales and the first fruits of the preaching of Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, Orson and Parley P. Pratt and Brigham Young, in England, from 1837 till 1850, risking their lives in the hand cart experiment of 1850, and brought together for a grand friendly handshake and social reunion after fifty-one years.

The gathering is in good hands, in the person of a committee composed of S. E. Jones, Thomas Dobson and L. A. Bailey, with whom we traveled every mile of the journey from Brammerly Moor dock, Liverpool, England; to Boston; Iowa City, Ia.; Florence, Neb., and to Salt Lake City.

General Robert T. Burton is listed as one of the rescuers to address the surviving veterans, with many others, nor will the company be satisfied without an address from the recorder, James G. Bleak, who kept a faithful diary of every day's travel, when the shafts of his hand cart were his writing desk. Oh, for the shades of Eph Hawks, Dan W. Jones, Joseph A. Young, George D. Grant, David Grant and Cyrus H. Wheelock, all now gone across the river, but glad to say we have still with us General

Burton, William Kimball, John R. Murdoch and a score or two of the fearless rescuers that helped and stayed with us through 375 miles of snow.

After the reunion in the columns of The Sunday Herald will be found the name of every member that crossed the plains in every company—hand cart or wagon company—that year, and as far as possible, the names and number that died in each company. All this has never yet been put in print.

From the diaries kept on the journey and historical record yet obtainable, and from his memory, the writer intends to furnish The Herald with at least a one-column article weekly. Date of leaving Iowa City; the distance covered every day from there to Florence, Neb.; our start from Florence; data passing Fort Kearney; Laramie; the Platte bridge; the arrival there of Joseph A. Young, Dan W. Jones and Abo Garr, our first rescuers, Oct. 28, 1856, with many thrilling and touching incidents never yet published.

Let every living hand cart veteran of 1856 and subsequent years till 1862 come to this reunion, with as many of their sons and daughters as possible, and learn the record of your stalwart fathers and mothers, whose hardships and sufferings exceed anything that the pioneers passed through or endured. The doors of the Assembly hall will be thrown open at 10:30 a. m. and the formal meeting will start at 2 p. m. with another meeting in the evening at 7:30 p. m.

INSURANCE MAN WITH COOL NERVE GETS PRIVATE CAR ON RIO GRANDE

C. E. Miller, special agent for the Hartford Fire Insurance company, had the ambition of his life gratified Sunday last. He acquired the ownership of a private car on the D. & R. G. If he had known that prosperity was thus going to thrust itself upon him he might have asked some of his friends and the ride from Provo to Salt Lake City might have been a more festive occasion. As it was, he and Dame Fortune were the only occupants.

Mr. Miller went to Provo to a dinner with some friends Sunday. When he got on the train to come back the cars were crowded and two extra ones were hitched on by the railroad. The crowd, like sheep, filed into only the forward one, leaving the other one vacant. Mr. Miller, with characteristic modesty was the last one aboard and there was no seat, but with equally characteristic curiosity he penetrated into the idea that perhaps the last car wasn't there just for looks, opened the door, walked in, sat down and read The Sunday Herald until he got into Salt Lake City. He didn't have any company because of his remark to the first one who started to get into the car at American Fork. It was a week. He individual with several bundles. "Excuse me," said Miller, but this is a private car." The individual butted hastily out. There weren't any other seats left in the train, so he had to stand on the platform. At the other stops when incoming passengers would try to get in the little fellow with the bundles would tell them: "Don't go in there; that is a private car." This appears to Mr. Miller to show the life of a deception, even if uttered in jest.

Miller is noted for his wit. When in Salt Lake he lives at the Wilson.
